PRESIDENT OF INDIA GRACES THE NATIONAL SCIENTIFIC CONVENTION ON HOMOEOPATHY AT BHUBANESWAR

BHUBANESWAR – 26 Nov, 2026 The President of India, Droupadi Murmu graced the National Scientific Convention on Homoeopathy at Bhubaneswar, Odisha today (November 25, 2026).

Speaking on the occasion, the President said that homoeopathy represents an important part of India's diverse healthcare landscape. Over the years, it has developed a wide institutional presence in India and has become accessible to people through educational institutions, healthcare facilities and public health networks.

The President underlined that the future credibility and academic standing of homoeopathy will depend significantly on the scientific integrity of its research and the quality of clinical evidence it generates. She urged research institutions, medical colleges, universities and professional organisations to collaborate in developing a strong research culture. She stated that the National Scientific Convention on Homoeopathy provides an excellent platform for meaningful academic engagement, institutional partnerships and a shared vision for the future. She advised participants, particularly young researchers and professionals, to make full use of this opportunity.
